

Must an employer include shift differentials and hazard pay in calculating an employee's hourly rate for earned paid sick time purposes?

The Industrial Commission is proposing rules consistent with the following:

Shift differentials and premiums meant to compensate an employee for work performed under differing conditions (such as hazard pay or a shift differential for working at night) must be included when computing an employee's hourly rate for earned paid sick time purposes. On the other hand, overtime, holiday pay, bonuses, other types of incentive pay (which do not include shift differentials and premiums meant to compensate an employee for work performed under differing conditions), tips, and gifts do not need to be included in an hourly rate determination.

Must an employer include bonuses, overtime, and holiday pay in calculating an employee's hourly rate for earned paid sick time purposes?

The Industrial Commission is proposing rules consistent with the following:

Overtime, holiday pay, bonuses, other types of incentive pay (which do not include shift differentials and premiums meant to compensate an employee for work performed under differing conditions), tips, and gifts do not need to be included in an hourly rate determination. On the other hand, shift differentials and premiums meant to compensate an employee for work performed under differing conditions (such as hazard pay or a shift differential for working at night) should be included when computing an employee's hourly rate.

Must an employer pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of each year or at separation?

No, but an employer may choose to pay out unused earned paid sick time at the end of the employer's year or at separation. The Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act does not require an employer to pay employees for unused earned paid sick time at the end of each year or at separation. An employer who elects to pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of the employer's year must comply with the requirements of Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4).

Is an employer required to provide notice to its employees concerning earned paid sick time rights and responsibilities?

Yes. Employers must provide employees written notice of the following at the commencement of employment or by July 1, 2017, whichever is later:

- Employees are entitled to earned paid sick time;
- The amount of earned paid sick time that employees are entitled to accrue;
- The terms of use guaranteed by Arizona's earned paid sick time laws;
- That retaliation against employees who request or use earned paid sick time is prohibited;
- That each employee has the right to file a complaint if earned paid sick time is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliation for requesting or taking earned paid sick time; and

- Contact information for the Industrial Commission.

The Industrial Commission's 2017 model earned paid sick time notice can be found here.

An employer must also provide employees either in or on an attachment to the employee's regular paycheck:

- The amount of earned paid sick time available to the employee;
- The amount of earned paid sick time taken by the employee to date in the year; and
- The amount of pay time the employee has received as earned paid sick time.

Note: The Industrial Commission is proposing rules that would define these terms as follows:

- "Amount of earned paid sick time available to the employee" means the amount of earned paid sick time that is available to the employee for use in the current year.
- "Amount of earned paid sick time taken by the employee to date in the year" means the amount of earned paid sick time taken by the employee to date in the current year. Where an employee has used available equivalent paid time off for either the purposes enumerated in Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-373 or other purposes, the employer may count that usage towards the "amount of earned paid sick time taken by the employee to date in the year."
- "Amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time" means the amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time to date in the current year. Where an employee has received pay for equivalent paid time off for the purposes enumerated in Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-373 or other purposes, the employer may count that pay towards the "amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time."
- "Employee's regular paycheck" means a regular payroll record that is readily available to employees and contains the information required by Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-375(C), including physical or electronic paychecks or paystubs.

Can an employer satisfy the earned paid sick time notice requirements by posting the Industrial Commission's model earned paid sick time notice?

Yes. An employer can satisfy the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act's notice requirements by posting in the workplace the Industrial Commission's model earned paid sick time notice, or a separate notice that meets the notice requirements in Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-375.

See Is an employer required to provide notice to its employees concerning earned paid sick time rights and responsibilities?

Can an employer donate or loan earned paid sick time to an employee?

Yes, subject to the employer's allowance of such practices.

How soon can an employee begin using earned paid sick time?

An employee may use earned paid sick time as it is accrued or otherwise available for use. An employer may require an employee hired after July 1, 2017, to wait 90 calendar days after the start of employment before using accrued earned paid sick time.

Must an employer carry forward balances of unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year to the next year?

The Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act (the “Act”) provides that earned paid sick time must be carried over to the following year, subject to usage limitations based on employer size. Carry over does not affect accrual or use rights under the Act.

Example 1. Employer with 15 or more employees. Employee A accrues 40 hours of earned paid sick time in Year 1 and does not use any of the accrued time. The proposed rule would allow Employee A to carry forward the 40 hours of accrued but unused earned paid sick time to Year 2 (unless the employer exercises its buy back option pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4)). Assuming the employer did not buy back hours pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4), Employee A remains entitled to accrue another 40 hours of earned paid sick time in Year 2 (for a maximum balance of 80 hours). If, at the end of Year 2, Employee A has 80 hours of unused earned paid sick time and the employer does not exercise its buyback option pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4), Employee A is entitled to carry forward only 40 hours of earned paid sick time into Year 3 (though they may accrue another 40 hours in the course of Year 3). NOTE: Subject to the employer’s agreement to be more generous than the Act requires, Employee A may only use 40 hours of earned paid sick time in any given year.

Example 2. Employer with fewer than 15 employees. Employee B accrues 24 hours of earned paid sick time in Year 1 and does not use any of the accrued time. The proposed rule would allow Employee A to carry forward the 24 hours of accrued but unused earned paid sick time to Year 2 (unless the employer exercises its buy back option pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4)). Assuming the employer did not buy back hours pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4), Employee B remains entitled to accrue another 24 hours of earned paid sick time in Year 2 (for a maximum balance of 48 hours). If, at the end of Year 2, Employee B has 48 hours of unused earned paid sick time and the employer does not exercise its buyback option pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4), Employee B is entitled to carry forward only 24 hours of earned paid sick time into Year 3 (though they may accrue another 24 hours in the course of Year 3). NOTE: Subject to the employer’s agreement to be more generous than the Act requires, Employee B may only use 24 hours of earned paid sick time in any given year.

Alternatively, in lieu of carry over, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4). Because the Act permits employers to provide paid leave policies that are more generous than the requirements of the Act, the Industrial Commission is proposing rules consistent with the following, subject to permissible restrictions on a new hire’s use of earned paid sick time:

- An employer with 15 or more employees that provides its employees for immediate use at the beginning of each year 40 or more hours of earned paid sick time or 40 or more hours of equivalent paid time off is not required to provide carryover or additional accrual.

- An employer with fewer than 15 employees that provides its employees for immediate use at the beginning of each year 24 or more hours of earned paid sick time or 24 or more hours of equivalent paid time off is not required to provide carryover or additional accrual.

See May an employer offer more generous earned paid sick time policies than those required by the Act?; see also How does an employer front load earned paid sick time for a new hire?

Is an employer that front loads earned paid sick time required to provide additional accrual or carryover?

Because annually front loading earned paid sick time is more generous than the Act's carryover and accrual requirements, the Industrial Commission is proposing rules consistent with the following:

1. An employer with 15 or more employees that provides its employees for immediate use at the beginning of each year 40 or more hours of earned paid sick time or 40 or more hours of equivalent paid time off is not required to provide carryover or additional accrual.
2. An employer with fewer than 15 employees that provides its employees for immediate use at the beginning of each year 24 or more hours of earned paid sick time or 24 or more hours of equivalent paid time off is not required to provide carryover or additional accrual.

Should a front-loading employer revert to a standard accrual and carryover methodology, it must provide its employees at the beginning of its first standard accrual year an amount of carryover that equals or exceeds the amount of unused earned paid sick time each employee would have been entitled to carry over, subject to usage limits, had the employer utilized an accrual method during the period of the employees' employment.

If an employee carries into a subsequent year the maximum amount of earned paid sick time that the employee can use in the subsequent year, will the employee still accrue additional earned paid sick time?

Yes. The Industrial Commission is proposing rules that provide that carry over does not affect accrual, usage rights, or usage limits under the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act. This means that, subject to front-loading or payout pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372\(D\)\(4\), an employee retains the right to accrue additional earned paid sick time in a subsequent year, regardless of the amount of earned paid sick time carried over to the subsequent year. Carried over earned paid sick time, however, may remain subject to yearly usage limits. See May an employer offer more generous earned paid sick time policies than those required by the Act? See also Is an employer that front loads earned paid sick time required to provide additional accrual or carryover?

Example 1. Employer with 15 or more employees. Employee A accrues 40 hours of earned paid sick time in Year 1 and does not use any of the accrued time. The proposed rule would allow Employee A to carry forward the 40 hours of accrued but unused earned paid sick time to Year 2 (unless the employer exercises its buy back option pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4)). Assuming the employer did not buy back hours pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4), Employee A remains entitled to accrue another 40 hours of earned paid sick time in Year 2 (for a maximum balance of 80 hours). If, at the end of Year 2, Employee A has 80 hours of unused earned paid sick time and the employer does not exercise its buyback option pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4), Employee A is entitled to carry forward only 40 hours of earned paid sick time into Year 3 (though they may accrue another 40 hours in the course of Year 3). NOTE: Subject to the employer's agreement to be more generous than the Act requires, Employee A may only use 40 hours of earned paid sick time in any given year.

Example 2. Employer with fewer than 15 employees. Employee B accrues 24 hours of earned paid sick time in Year 1 and does not use any of the accrued time. The proposed rule would allow Employee A to carry forward the 24 hours of accrued but unused earned paid sick time to Year 2 (unless the employer exercises its buy back option pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4)). Assuming the employer did not buy back hours pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4), Employee B remains entitled to accrue another 24 hours of earned paid sick time in Year 2 (for a maximum balance of 48 hours). If, at the end of Year 2, Employee B has 48 hours of unused earned paid sick time and the employer does not exercise its buyback option pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-372(D)(4), Employee B is entitled to carry forward only 24 hours of earned paid sick time into Year 3 (though they may accrue another 24 hours in the course of Year 3). NOTE: Subject to the employer's agreement to be more generous than the Act requires, Employee B may only use 24 hours of earned paid sick time in any given year.

What happens to accrued earned paid sick time if an employee is separated from employment and later rehired?

If rehire occurs within nine months of separation from the same employer, any previously-accrued, unused earned paid sick time must be reinstated and the employee is entitled to use and accrue earned paid sick time immediately at the re-commencement of employment.

But see If an employer voluntarily pays an employee for unused earned paid sick time at separation from employment, is the employer required to reinstate the employee's accrued but unused earned paid sick time if the employee is rehired within nine months?

If an employer voluntarily pays an employee for unused earned paid sick time at separation from employment, is the employer required to reinstate the employee's unused earned paid sick time if the employee is rehired within nine months?

Absent additional statutory or judicial guidance, the Industrial Commission will not enforce against an employer that voluntarily pays an employee for unused earned paid sick time at separation from employment and does not reinstate earned paid sick time if the employee is rehired within nine months, provided that the employee accepted the payment for the unused earned paid sick time.

Can an employer offer a single bank of paid time off that may be used for earned paid sick time or other purposes (such as vacation, bereavement, and holiday leave)?

Yes, provided that the paid time off meets or exceeds the requirements of the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act.

When an employer's paid leave policy either meets or exceeds the requirements of the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act, can the employer carve out a specific bank of time that only applies to earned paid sick time?

Yes. The Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act does not prohibit tracking earned paid sick time separately from other forms of leave.

If an employer's paid leave policy either meets or exceeds the requirements of the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act, can an employer count time that was accrued and/or used before the effective date of the Act (July 1, 2017)?

No. Because the Fair Wages and Health Families Act mandates that earned paid sick time begins to accrue at the commencement of employment or on July 1, 2017, whichever is later, there is no statutory basis for counting leave time accrued or used before July 1, 2017. The Industrial Commission has, however, provided methods for prorating the remainder of an employer's year if an employer's year ends less than 365 days after July 1, 2017. See If an employer's selected "year" ends less than 365 days after the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act's earned paid sick time effective date \(July 1, 2017\), can that employer prorate its employees' annual earned paid sick time accrual and usage entitlements in the first partial year after July 1, 2017 based on the number of days remaining in the employer's "year?"

How does an employee request earned paid sick time?

A request to use earned paid sick time may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request to use earned paid sick time must include the expected duration of the absence.

When leave is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to follow a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice may not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy. See Can an employer require notice of the need to use earned paid sick time when the need is not foreseeable?

The Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act gives different options for requesting earned paid sick time (orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer). Can an employer decide which of these options an employee must use to make a leave request?

No, unless the leave is unforeseeable and the employer has provided a written policy concerning unforeseeable leave. The Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act permits an employee to use any available option (orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer) when requesting earned paid sick time. An employer is not permitted to interfere with an employee's right to use any of the available options. When leave is not foreseeable, however, the employer may require an employee to follow a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice may not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy. See Can an employer require notice of the need to use earned paid sick time when the need is not foreseeable?

Must an employee give an employer advance notice of intent to use earned paid sick time?

When foreseeable, an employee must make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need to use earned paid sick time in advance and should schedule the leave in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the employer's operations.

When leave is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to follow a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice may not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy. See Can an employer require notice of the need to use earned paid sick time when the need is not foreseeable?

What is an employer's recourse if an employee fails to provide notice in accordance with an employer's written policy when earned paid sick leave is not foreseeable?

Absent additional legislative or judicial guidance, when leave is not foreseeable, the Industrial Commission will not enforce against an employer who elects not to designate an employee's leave as earned paid sick time when the employee fails to provide notice in accordance with the employer's written policy, provided that: (1) that employer provided to the employee a copy of the written policy; (2) the written policy does not discriminate against employees using earned paid sick time; and (3) the employee does not have a reasonable justification (such as an emergency situation or the employee's own incapacitation) for failing to follow the written policy.

Can an employee's family member, medical provider, friend, or other person submit a request for earned paid sick time on an employee's behalf?

The Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act (the "Act") states that "[e]arned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means or by any other means acceptable to the employer." The Act is silent as to whether an employee's family member, medical provider, friend, or other person may submit a request on the employee's behalf. Because the Act authorizes the use of earned paid sick time for conditions that may render an employee unable to make requests, authorized individuals may request earned paid sick time for an employee in appropriate circumstances.

What is an employer's recourse if an employee uses earned paid sick time for purposes that are not enumerated in the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act?

Absent additional legislative or judicial guidance, the Industrial Commission will not enforce against employers who elect not to designate leave time used for purposes other than those enumerated in the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act (the "Act") as earned paid sick time.

What is the smallest increment of earned paid sick time that an employee can use?

Earned paid sick time can either be used in hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time, whichever is smaller. For example, if an employer's payroll system accounts for absences or use of other time in 6 minute increments (a tenth of an hour), an employee may use earned paid sick time in this same increment.

The Industrial Commission has proposed rules that define the “smallest increment that the employer’s payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time” as the smallest increment of time that an employer utilizes, by policy or practice, to account for absences or use of other paid time off.

Can an employer require that an employee document an absence of fewer than three consecutive work days where federal law permits?

Yes. The Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act (the “Act”) provides that nothing in the Act may be interpreted or applied so as to create a conflict with federal law.

Is withholding perfect attendance bonuses because of earned paid sick time usage a violation of the Act?

Absent additional legislative or judicial guidance, the Industrial Commission does not intend to enforce against employers who deny perfect attendance bonuses to employees who utilize earned paid sick time, provided that employees who have used other leave types are similarly disqualified from perfect attendance bonuses.

What kind of posting and recordkeeping is required by Arizona’s earned paid sick time laws?

Unless otherwise exempted from the posting and recordkeeping requirements, employers subject to Arizona’s earned paid sick time laws are required to comply with notice, posting, and recordkeeping requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time. The requirements include: (1) posting earned paid sick time notices in the workplace; (2) providing employees with the employer’s business name, address, and telephone number in writing upon hire; (3) providing employees with a notice that informs them of their rights and responsibilities under the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act; and (4) maintaining payroll records in accordance with Arizona’s statutes and rules. For more information about which employers are subject to Arizona’s earned paid sick time laws, see Which employers are subject to earned paid sick time laws?

The Industrial Commission’s 2017 model earned paid sick time notice can be found here.

Note: The Industrial Commission is currently proposing rules that would exempt small employers (defined as a corporation, proprietorship, partnership, joint venture, limited liability company, trust, or association that has less than $500,000 in gross annual revenue) from the Act’s posting requirements.

The Industrial Commission is also proposing rules that would require employers to keep the following earned paid sick time records:

- The amount of earned paid sick time available to the employee;
- The amount of earned paid sick time taken by the employee to date in the year;
- The amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time; and
- The employee’s earned paid sick time balance. “The employee’s earned paid sick time balance” means the sum of earned paid sick time or equivalent paid time off that is: (1) carried over to the current year; (2) accrued to date in the current year; and (3) provided to date in the current year pursuant to A.R.S § 23-372(D)(4) or A.A.C. R20-5-1206(F), (G), or (H).

The Industrial Commission is proposing rules that would define these terms as follows:

- “Amount of earned paid sick time available to the employee” means the amount of earned paid sick time or equivalent paid time off that is available to the employee for use in the current year.
- “Amount of earned paid sick time taken by the employee to date in the year” means the amount of earned paid sick time or equivalent paid time off taken by the employee to date in the current year. Where an employee has used available equivalent paid time off for either the purposes enumerated in Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-373 or other purposes, the employer may count that usage towards the “amount of earned paid sick time taken by the employee to date in the year.”
- “Amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time” means the amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time or equivalent paid time off to date in the current year. Where an employee has received pay for equivalent paid time off for the purposes enumerated in Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-373 or other purposes, the employer may count that pay towards the “amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time.”

The Industrial Commission will update this FAQ as the rulemaking process progresses.

What information must be recorded in, or on an attachment to, the employee's regular paycheck?

The Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act (the “Act”) requires that the following information be recorded in, or on an attachment to, the employee's regular paycheck (see What qualifies as an employee's regular paycheck? For more information about the Industrial Commission's proposed definition of an “employee's regular paycheck):

- The amount of earned paid sick time available to the employee;
- The amount of earned paid sick time taken by the employee to date in the year; and
- The amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time.

Note: The Industrial Commission is proposing rules that would define these terms as follows:

- “Amount of earned paid sick time available to the employee” means the amount of earned paid sick time or equivalent paid time off that is available to the employee for use in the current year.
- “Amount of earned paid sick time taken by the employee to date in the year” means the amount of earned paid sick time or equivalent paid time off taken by the employee to date in the current year. Where an employee has used available equivalent paid time off for either the purposes enumerated in Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-373 or other purposes, the employer may count that usage towards the “amount of earned paid sick time taken by the employee to date in the year.”

- “Amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time” means the amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time or equivalent paid time off to date in the current year. Where an employee has received pay for equivalent paid time off for the purposes enumerated in Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-373 or other purposes, the employer may count that pay towards the “amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time.”

When an employer’s paid leave policy either meets or exceeds the requirements of the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act, and an employee uses accrued leave for reasons unrelated to earned paid sick time (such as vacation), how does the employer account for this time on the employee’s regular paycheck?

The Industrial Commission is proposing rules that permit an employer to count equivalent paid time off (see What is equivalent paid time off?) used for either the purposes enumerated in Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-373 or other purposes (such as vacation) towards the “amount of earned paid sick time taken by the employee to date in the year” and the “amount of pay the employee has received as earned paid sick time.” In other words, when an employee uses equivalent paid time (for earned paid sick time, vacation, or another reasons) the employer may count that time as “taken” and “received” on the employee’s regular paycheck. See What information must be recorded in, or on an attachment to, the employee's regular paycheck? for definitions of these terms.

What qualifies as an employee’s regular paycheck?

The Industrial Commission is proposing rules that define an “employee’s regular paycheck” as a regular payroll record that is readily available to employees and contains the information required by Arizona Revised Statutes § 23-375(C), including physical or electronic paychecks or paystubs.

How do collective bargaining agreements affect earned paid sick time obligations and rights?

The Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act’s (the “Act”) earned paid sick time requirements do not apply to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement, provided that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms. Additionally, the Act’s earned paid sick time provisions do not apply to employees covered by a collective bargaining agreement in effect on the July 1, 2017 until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement.

How do commonly-owned entities account for earned paid sick time?

Absent addition legislative or judicial guidance, the Industrial Commission will consider multiple entities as a single employer for purposes of the Act’s earned paid sick time provisions when sufficient commonality exists between the entities. The Industrial Commission will consider various factors, including the following, when determining whether multiple entities constitute a common employer:

- Who owns the employers (i.e., one employer owns part or all of the other or they have common owners);

- Whether the employers have any overlapping officers, directors, executives, or managers;
- Whether the employers share control over operations (e.g., hiring, firing, payroll, advertising, overhead costs);
- Whether the employers' operations are intermingled (e.g., there is one administrative operation for all employers, or the same person schedules and pays the employees regardless of which employer they work for);
- Whether one employer supervises the work of the other;
- Whether the employers share supervisory authority for the employee;
- Whether the employers treat the employees as a pool of employees available to all;
- Whether the potential joint employers share clients or customers; and
- Whether there are any agreements between the employers.

Violations of Proposition 206 - The Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act

What recourse does an employee have against an employer that is not paying minimum wage or earned paid sick time?

Employees who believe that their employer is violating the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act may file a complaint with the Labor Department of the Industrial Commission or file a civil lawsuit. What is an “adverse action” within the meaning of the Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act?

The Fair Wages and Healthy Families Act (the “Act”) does not define “adverse action.” Absent additional legislative or judicial guidance, the Industrial Commission will defer to established case law when determining whether an employee has been subjected to an adverse action.
